THERESA May is facing pressure from rebellious Tory Brexiteers to stand down by the end of June, after a crunch meeting last night.

But powerful Tory backbenchers are understood to be split down the middle over changing the rules to make it easier to oust the PM.

The PM is facing pressure to quit by the end of June, after the executive of the influential 1922 Committee of Tory backbench MPs met last night.

But they are said to be unable to agree on whether to change party rules that stop Mrs May facing another no-confidence vote till December, Brexiteer executives want the rules amended to try to oust the PM, but Remainers want her to stay.

Senior Tory Nigel Evans said: "It is with great reluctance that I've now come to the conclusion myself that we need somebody new at No10 to Grassroots Tories are also plotting to force Mrs May out. The PM could be further rocked, as the Tories are expected to perform badly in local and EU elections next month.

The PM is considering giving MPs a vote on key Brexit legislation as early as next week. But No10 suggested it would only happen if there was a chance of Labour giving it 'secure passage" through Commons.

One source said: "If we know they are going to shut it down immediately then we'd think twice but then also we're running out of time."

PLANS A Virgin train

'Virgin wants a frée-for-all on the trains'

BY MARK ELLIS

UNIONS have condemned Virgin for suggesting rail passengers without a reservation should be barred from long-distance trains.

In a plea to the Rail Review, Virgin Group, which runs trains on the West Coast Main Line, also called for "dynamic pricing", which would raise fares for popular trains.

It also called for the franchising system for longdistance routes to be replaced with an auction for train slots.

Mick Cash, of the RMT, said: "What Virgin are proposing is a de-regulated free-for-all. It would lead to total chaos.

It would trap passengers "in a transport nightmare of escalating fares where prices rise by the minute according to availability".

IAN McShane says the time is right for a Lovejoy revival - but with a much younger "gorgeous blonde" as the antiques dealer.

This year marks the 25th anniversary since the much-loved series finished on BBC1.

McShane became one of the UK's most popular actors for his role as the charming but roguish wheeler-dealer.

And now the 76-year-old feels a revival would work with him introducing his young daughter to run the business, set in East Anglia.

McShane said: "Everybody keeps asking me about my thing in Lovejoy and I said if you are going to do Lovejoy, then hire a daughter.

"It would be a perfect. It is a great part for a young actress in England. You bring it back, talk about Lovejoy and then in walks this gorgeous blonde and that is the new Lovejoy.

THE EASTER MASSACRE: KILLER

>>> Hotel suicide bombers were two wealthy brothers >>> Pregnant wife blew up herself, her 3 kids & 3 cops

ONE of the Sri Lankan suicide bombers was caught on film as he blew up 67 innocent worshippers - as details emerged of husband and wife terrorists involved in the Easter Sunday massacre.

The extremist, named as Mohamed Thala Farzan, was seen casually strolling into St Sebastian's church in Negombo, carrying a bomb inside a rucksack.

With callous indifference, he ruffles the hair of a child moments before he unleashes carnage.

A church camera filmed him disappearing in a flash of smoke as he set off a device which sprayed metal all around him, killing anyone in its path.

Witness Dilip Fernando said: "At JIHADI Ilham Ibrahim the end of the mass my family saw one young man go into the church with a heavy bag. He touched my granddaughter's head on the way past. It was the bomber."

The death toll from attacks on three hotels and three churches rose to at least 321 yesterday, with 45 children among them.

It also emerged the seven-strong terror gang

Ibrahim and Ilham's pregnant wife Fatima. She blew up herself, her three children and three police officers when they approached her.

Ilham, 36, targeted the Shangri-La hotel where Briton Ben Nicholson lost wife Anita, 42, son Alex, 14, and daughter Annabel, 11.

The killer's picture was used in an image released by Islamic State, which yesterday claimed responsibility for the attacks. A group photo is said to show all seven bombers with the alleged ringleader Moulvi Zahran Hashim.

Ilham was shown clasping a knife with his face masked. An accomplice, possibly Hashim, set off a second device which killed British brother and sister Daniel, 19, and Amelie Linsey, 15.

When police later appeared at Ilham's home in Dematagoda, Colombo, Fatima set off a suicide vest, killing her unborn child, three young sons, a police inspector and two constables.

Her husband's 38-year-old brother Inshaf was the bomber who targeted the Cinnamon Grand hotel, according to police sources. His copper firm, called Colossus on an industrial estate east of Colombo, is believed to have been used as a bomb factory, supplying bolts and screws which filled the suicide vests to cause maximum carnage.

Nine Sri Lankans at the factory, including the included wealthy brothers Ilham and Inshaf manager, were arrested shortly before midnight on Sunday. They were sleeping in a room with 15 beds, working alongside 23 Indians, and 11 Bangladeshis, who knew nothing about the heinous plans. The murderous brothers had lived a life of privilege and luxury and the atrocity has shocked their friends and family.

Inshaf shared a £1.5million mansion with his wife and four children – a girl of eight and three boys aged six, four and two - on one of the most exclusive streets in Colombo.

His brother-in-law, Ashkhan Alawdeen, owns the house, and helps to run family jewellery businesses. Ashkhan said: "When the bombings were going on I was panicking.

"I was in total shock. My brother-in-law said he was going to Zambia on Friday for work and went to the airport with my sister and their four children in a car. When he said goodbye he held her head and said, 'Be strong'.

'She thought it was a bit strange at the time but didn't think anything of it because she assumed he was just going on a work trip.

"After that we all went to our parents' home outside Colombo and were enjoying our weekend when this happened.

'My sister has broken down. This is not something we expect in our family. If I had any inkling about what he was planning to do I would have gone straight to the police.

My brother-in-law is a psychopath. He deserves to be punished in hell." Police have taken laptops and CCTV belonging to Inshaf, as

What goes on inside their heads

WOULD-be suicide bombers have a religious commitment that is no stronger than that of other extremists who choose not to kill themselves, experts discovered. But the Israeli researchers also found that the bomb carriers are intimidated by people in positions of authority and are unable to see the bigger picture.

Psychologist and terrorism expert Ariel Merari gained interviews with 15 would-be suicide bombers in jail.

The Israeli former professor and his research team found evidence of depression and the subjects being unable to handle stressful situations.

In the tests - which were conducted some years ago they found the bombers had suicidal tendencies and had tried to kill themselves before but not in a terror situation.

The interviewees had survived for various reasons. such as the bomb failing to go off because of a technical defect or because they were captured before they were able to detonate a blast.

But the researchers found the organisers responsible for planning suicide bombings had bigger egos, were better equipped mentally to handle stress and mostly unwilling to consider a suicide attack themselves.

Mum-of-two Sajeethe said her husband Feisal, 37, was arrested after the incident because he went outside to see what was going on.

She added: "When the first bomb went off we were told to stay in and not open the doors.

Then the second bomb went off and my husband went out to see what was happening and he was arrested because he was outdoors.

"He is still in custody, but has done nothing wrong. Muslims are getting caught up in this when they are innocent." It is thought the second member of the terror gang, as there is damage $\,$ to two floors at the address. This has yet to be confirmed by police.

Another neighbour Zulker Nain, 28, watched as sniffer dogs went through the properties near to the address, including his own. "I could feel the blast as soon as the bomb went off," he said.

There was a kind of vibration and I went upstairs to see what was going on, to see where the noise came from."

Locals at a nearby mosque said feelings against the bombers were running high.

They have wrecked our lives now," said one. "There are those who want to go and destroy their homes to show how strong our feelings are about what they have done."

Ashkhan also said his family now wants to "shame" Inshaf. He added: "I believe someone brainwashed him.

"He never mentioned PROBE Cordon outside Ilham's home Islamic State and never had extremist views. He had it all, a good business, a lovely wife and a four adorable children. Why would he do something like this?" The atrocity is said to have been led by radical Islamist group National Thowheed Jamath with support from abroad. Intelligence on the attacks was brought to police on April 4. But meant warnings were never passed on to the cabinet. Sri Lanka state minister Ruwan Wijewardene said early findings of the investigation suggested the bombings were carried out in revenge for the Christchurch attacks.

Fifty Muslim worshippers were killed by an alleged white supremacist gunman on March 15 in New Zealand. Meanwhile, British counter terror officers at MI5 are monitoring the blast aftermath for signs of a threat to the UK.

A senior Whitehall source told the Mirror: "Intelligence officers inevitably are assessing at speed how the Sri Lanka attack could affect Britain. They are liaising with all of the other western intelligence agencies and the Sri Lankan authorities to see if there is a British link.

"It looks like an Islamic State-supported attack and what we predicted would happen has happened - that as it faced military defeat IS ordered fighters to return to their homelands and launch attacks." Scotland Yard confirmed counter-terror officers were being deployed to Sri Lanka.

It is understood two SAS soldiers have also been sent to gather intelligence.

THE EASTER

THE white flowers neatly arranged in church as part of the celebrations have wilted in the heat and are spattered with the blood of innocent victims of the Easter massacre.

Mourners who lost loved ones frantically scrub at the building's walls, desperate to erase the streaks of crimson.

The devastation caused by the terrorist outrage at the weekend has the entire nation in its cruel grip.

And like the blood stains inside St Sebastian's Church in Negombo, a majority Catholic town north of Colombo, the grief felt by the people here will take a long time to fade.

Yesterday was declared a national day of mourning and the country fell silent at 8.30am, the time the first of Sunday's six bombs was detonated.

Flags were lowered to half-mast and people, many of them in tears, bowed their heads in respect.

Later, the first mass funeral for about 30 victims took place at St Sebastian's, which was bombed as around 1,000 parishioners gathered for the traditional Easter service.

We watch as a woman mourner is overcome with grief when two coffins are carried in.

At the Don David Katuwapitya cemetry in Colombo, there were similar scenes of heartbreaking sorrow.

Mirror photographer Rowan Griffiths captured Amelie's brother Daniel also died the scenes of devastation

But 67 men, women and children died. They included Rangana Fernando, his wife Danadiri, their daughters Biola, six, Leona, four, and 11-month-old son Seth. They were among the dead buried amid "unimaginable grief" yesterday.

In Colombo, a funeral procession for a young Sri Lankan victim passed through the capital, the front vehicle carrying a photo of him on his wedding day. The cortege was surrounded by tuk-tuks, the Britons. In Colombo, a security cordon surrounds the Shangri-La luxury resort where British families lost their lives. At the nearby Kingsbury hotel, teams of workers are cleaning up after the series of co-ordinated attacks.

"They are struggling to remove the blood from the walls," a former army officer tells me.

Among the British victims were Dr Sally Bradley and her husband Bill Harrop, a retired fireman. They had been living in Perth, Australia, where Dr Bradley practised as a GP, since 2013, but were looking forward to coming back to the UK, and retirement in the Cotswolds.

Dr Bradley's brother, former Labour MP Lord Keith Bradley, said: "She was truly a bright light in many people's lives. She will always live in our hearts and the memories she provided will be forever cherished. I, and my family, will miss her more than words can articulate." Dr Bradley worked at the Rockingham Peel Group, where director Kathleen Smith told how the couple had been staying at a "posh" hotel as a treat for a few days, before moving to other parts of Sri Lanka.

Londoner Matthew Linsey, an investor in emerging markets, remembered his children Amelie, 15, and Daniel, 19, who had dual US-UK citizenship as he was born in the US.

He said: "Amelie was really fun. She Arnanda Indiga, a Buddhist who lives close to St Sebastian's church, believes people of all faiths can still live in harmony, despite the bombings.

He tells me how he lost Christian friends in the church attack. He says: "The majority of people here may be Buddhist, but we have Christians and Muslims here, we all live together.

"It is terrible for everyone who lives here, but we do not want to lose hope."

Keep our distance

USE a long spoon to sup with the devil should be the diplomatic advice when Donald Trump is welcomed to Britain for the 75th commemoration of D-Day.

Gifting the worst US president in living memory the honour of addressing both Houses of Parliament, or forcing him on the Queen as an overnight guest in Buckingham Palace would reward cheating and deception.

However America, if not Trump, is our foremost ally which means the president must be greeted formally with politeness, but this should not extend to servility.

Britain and Europe owe a great debt to US armed forces who, in 1944, fought and died in the landings which liberated continental Europe from the tyranny of Nazi rule. Sadly the draft dodger in the White House is a poor representative of brave, heroic men.

America First nationalist Trump is no real, close friend of Britain when he sees us as second best or worse.

BY NADA FARHOUD

OULDY cheese, weeksold ham, or a plate of leftovers from your Sunday roast dinner.

Chances are most of what you will find in the recesses of your fridge will end up in the bin.

Last year we threw away 10.2 million tons of food. Of this, five million tons was still edible.

That is the equivalent of £494million worth of food each week, according to research conducted by recipe box company Gousto for Stop Food Waste Day.

Confusing food labels such as "once opened" instructions, are inconsistent and unclear as to whether they are recommendations on food safety or quality – and contribute to food waste.

But also simply turning down the temperature in your fridge can help to keep food fresher.

Three-quarters of us run our fridges too warm - a move which could prevent up to 4.2 million of tonnes from being dumped and save each family a small fortune.

So what temperature should your fridge be and which shelves are best for what foods?

Read are guide on how to cut down on food waste.

It is better for the environment and your pocket too.

WHAT IS THE CORRECT TEMPERATURE FOR A FRIDGE?

Experts say the optimum overall temperature is between OC and 4C.

Aside from food going off before its best-before date, there are several warning signs that your fridge is at the wrong temperature.

Modern appliances have a built-in thermometer with some activating an alarm if the temperature drops below or above the optimum range

Condensation on the inside walls means it is too warm as the fridge's gas is being turned into liquid, which may contaminate food on the lower shelves. If it is too cold, ice maybe visible at the back.

This could also be caused by a faulty door allowing warm air from the outside into the fridge.

DON'T OVERFILL THE FRIDGE

The more stuffed your fridge shelves become, the harder it is to keep cool. Experts recommend turning down the thermostat by one degree if it is packed.

But an empty fridge is not efficient either. To prevent the fridge getting too cold, place a couple of jugs of water on a shelf to fill up space. Or you can temperature setting up a notch.

Ideally, a fridge should be around three-quarters full to allow cold air to circulate.

EMBRACE YOUR FREEZER

Many of the items in our fridges will be suitable for home freezing, which can extend their shelf life massively.

It does not have to be on the day of purchase either, just as long as it is before the use-by date.

A FRIDGE TOO FAR

Store food better so you waste less & save cash

PORTION CONTROL

Avoid cooking too much by sticking to recommended serving sizes listed on packaging. If you do over-cook - freeze the remaining leftovers for another day.

GIVE AWAY, DON'T THROW AWAY

If there is perfectly good food at risk of the bin, why not ask your neighbour if they would like it or donate it to a foodbank?

OLIO is also a free app which connects neighbours with each other and to their local shops so that surplus food can be shared around.

North London in 2015 to a company with a presence in 46 countries.

TAKE A SHELFIE

Photographing the contents of your fridge before you leave the house could save the average UK household £235 a year. Sainsbury's say by preventing over-buying.

KNOW THE DIFFERENCE

Nearly 20% of us are still confused by best-before and use-by dates. The use-by date is about safety and the most important to remember. Foods can be eaten (and most can be frozen) up until the use-by date, but not after.

Best-before refers to the quality and taste.

The food is most likely safe to eat after this date but may not be at its best in terms of flavour and texture.

You cannot beat looking, smelling, and tasting for a reliable indicator of how fresh the food is.

FORWARD PLAN

Dedicate 10 minutes of your week to checking what is in the fridge and cupboards, and creating a meal plan for the week ahead.

For example, make a chicken and vegetable soup on Monday and use the leftover vegetables to beef up your shepherd's pie later on in the week.

BIN RESPONSIBLY

If you have a garden, why not get a compost bag for any leftovers and peelings, or check with your council if they offer a food waste disposal service. Everything from egg shells to scraps left on vour plate will then be disposed of in an environmentallyfriendly fashion.

Keep it chilled or in the cupboard?

Scientists say keeping it in the cupboard has health risks.

BUTTER: Cupboard

Unlike milk, butter will not go bad if out of the fridge for a couple of days. EGGS: Fridge

Salmonella can live in fresh eggs, even with clean, uncracked shells, but small changes in temperature.

JAM/MARMALADE: Cupboard

Putting in a fridge stimulates mould.

CHEESE: Fridge

High protein levels act as an energy source for bacteria to grow.

AVOCADOS: Cupboard These go black quickly in a fridge.

FREEZE LEFTOVERS

Ice cube trays are not just for water. Leftover red wine can be frozen and used to add to a beef stew or spaghetti bolognese.

You can even freeze milk in an ice cube tray and pop one in your tea. Ideal for if you ever run out.

Ant & Dec's doggy DJ act fools judges

EXCLUSIVE BY MARK JEFFERIES

ANT and Dec secretly auditioned for Britain's Got Talent this year – and hoodwinked the judges.

The Geordie duo dressed up in dog costumes to perform as DJs and managed to fool Simon Cowell into putting them through on the ITV show.

A show source said: 'The worry was one of the judges would spot them or see through the act but it worked really well and it was hilarious when they didn't get buzzed off.

'When they took off their costumes the judges couldn't believe it, they were totally fooled."

The sketch at the Manchester studios is expected to go out in the final episode of the current auditions stages

Police chief: Most crimes not probed

BY TOM PETTIFOR

A SHORTAGE of police officers means nearly twothirds of crimes are not fully investigated by one of Britain's largest forces.

Greater Manchester
Police chief constable Ian Hopkins said about 600 offences were being shelved every day.

He added: "If your life is in danger we will be there in numbers."

But lesser offences such as vehicles being broken into would be "screened out" quickly.

Mr Hopkins added: "That's where the public have really started to feel it. That bit worries me."

Figures from 10 police forces this year revealed crimes recorded and closed within a day went from 194,500 to 431,000 in the four years to 2018.

TRUMP VISIT 'A WASTE OF OUR MONEY

MPs demand divisive leader's visit be axed

BY MIKEY SMITH, Political Correspondent and RUSSELL MYERS, Royal Editor

FURY over Donald Trump's controversial state visit was last night growing as MPs demanded it be axed to save taxpayers' cash.

Theresa May's decision to roll out the red carpet for a leader who many believe to be racist, divisive, misogynist and xenophobic sparked derision.

More than 50 MPs backed a Commons motion to stop his June 3-5 visit, which will coincide with events to mark the 75th anniversary of D-Day. Labour's Stephen Doughty sexist extremist who was happy to promote far-right content from Britain First.

Colleague Emily Thornberry added: "Theresa May has no business wasting taxpayers' money on all the pomp, ceremony and policing costs.

VOICE OF MIRROR:

Poorer kids face tougher jobs struggle

CHILDREN from poorer homes are twice as likely to end up jobless - and qualifications won't close the gap, a study shows.

Those on free school meals are twice as likely to be NEET, not in education, employment or training.

Even when they gain the same qualification levels as better-off peers, they are still 50% more likely not to be in education or work.

The gap is equivalent to 78,000 extra disadvantaged young people being NEET.

Andy Ratcliffe, of charity Impetus, said: "[Society] tells young people: 'Study hard, get your qualifica-tions and good jobs will follow'. For young people from disadvantaged backgrounds, this isn't true."

Chaplain in school 'sex abuse' trial

THE chaplain at a £35,000a-year private school gave a pupil smoked oysters, Turkish cigarettes and fine wines before molesting him, a court was told. Gary Dobbie, 67, alleg-

A jury was told he would invite the pupil to his lodgings, where they would watch TV in the dark, and he would molest him.

Hove crown court heard it happened "many times".

The boy also went on a trip with him and Dobbie allegedly became drunk before violently manhandling him, it was claimed. Dobbie denies all charges.

A TORY MP who escaped jail after fiddling his expenses has been accused of bullying at his constituency offices.

Chris Davies was yesterday fined £1,500 and ordered to do 50 hours of community service for faking two invoices in 2016.

His former office manager Sarah Lewis, who uncovered the false claims, quit last year over alleged bullying.
The 57-year-old said: "Chris would try to find fault with absolutely everything I did. "I felt intimidated by him. I found out my predecessor had left because Chris bullied him in pretty similar circumstances.

In documents seen by the Mirror, Brecon and Radnorshire MP Davies was criticised by branch officials. One 2107 email said: "Bullying CRIMINAL MP Davies any staff member falls into the category of completely unacceptable behaviour. I have no intention of seeing another association employee being hounded out."

Davies last month admitted giving false information relating to a £700 claim to supply his new office in Builth, Mid Wales, with photographs. He was sentenced at Southwark crown court in South London.

Sarah, who is suing him for constructive dismissal, had uncovered the fake invoices.

A spokesman for Davies said of the bullying allegations: "These are unfounded claims by a disgruntled ex-employee."

Samsung: Our folding phone is put on hold

BY RUKI SAYID

SAMSUNG has delayed the launch of its folding smartphone amid reports of broken screens, as experts said it rushed the release.

Reviewers have also slated the £1,800 Galaxy Fold for flickering, bulging and frozen screens. Some said the handsets broke down within a few days.

The device was due to be released here on May 3. No new date has been set and Samsung has ordered further tests on the phone. Samsung said: "Some [reviewers] also showed us how the device needs further improvements."

Albert Yong, of finance firm Petra Capital Management, said: "Samsung unveiled the product too prematurely when it was not technologically ready.

"It was anxious to become the first one to launch the product."

Casualty suicide plot affected my health... & birth of our twins left me with PTSD

Actor Michael on struggles at work and home

EXCLUSIVEBY JANE ODDY and TOM BRYANT Head of Showbiz

CASUALTY star Michael Stevenson has revealed how playing a paramedic in the grips of depression affected his health and home life.

The 36-year-old actor also told how he believes he suffered from PTSD after the traumatic birth of his twins.

His character Iain Dean is at the centre of a special episode of the BBC drama this Saturday only the second time in the show's history that all the action is set outside the hospital.

It follows Iain's journey of recovery after trying to take his own life earlier this year.

Michael, who has six-year-old son Jack and four-year-old twin girls Emmy and Isla with actress Lauren Crace, said: "I've not been the picture of health in the last 12 months.

You're very lucky if you can do that kind of thing and it not affect you.

"I didn't go the gym for a year. What you're playing on screen affects you in your home life. I ate a lot of junk food, pies, Scotch eggs. There were times when I felt quite isolated. I drive two hours to work, then I work 10 hours playing a depressed person, then I drive for two hours to get home, on my own in the car."

He revealed his own mental health battle. He said: "I probably had mild PTSD after my twins were born. That was a pretty traumatic time. They thought they had malrotation, which can be really dangerous in the stomach.

heard anything from us for a few days and were worried, and hearing his voice, it all came out and I wept." Michael said the episode depicting Iain coming back from the brink is important to show viewers that there is hope.

PARAMEDICS are being given body-worn cameras to record attacks against them by the public.

An £8million, three-year trial in three of the 10 English ambulance services will be extended to the others if successful. NHS data shows that a third of ambulance staff have been victims of violence in the last year.

An initial three-month trial of the cameras by the North East Ambulance Service last year reportedly resulted in a fall in attacks. Assaults on staff across the NHS are at a record high, with 23,009 attacks in England in 2017/18, up from 13,417 in 2010/11.

Health Minister Stephen Hammond said: "Investigating every incident of violence and abuse against staff is essential if we are to reduce the frequency of future incidents. NHS organisations must commit sufficient resources to get this right."

In a speech to health leaders today, he will say: "We can make sure every NHS member of staff is protected, supported and valued."

to end 'slum' home builds

LABOUR will close Tory loopholes which allow developers to "dodge" their social housing obligations and build "slum" homes.

Changes to the regulations since 2013 enable owners to alter a building's use without needing planning permission.

As a result former offices have been turned into around 42,000 new homes over the last three years.

Yet some of these do not meet national minimum space standards.

Labour MP John Healey said: "Tory rules have enabled firms to dodge affordable homes requirements and build slums.

"To fix the housing crisis we need genuinely affordable, high quality homes."

SNOOKER legend Jimmy White has opened up about his past love of drugs, admitting it could have killed him if he had beaten Alex Higgins to win the 1982 World Championship.

White, 56, has had a turbulent life which has seen him beat cancer, a crack addiction and a gambling habit which cost him more than a million pounds.

The fans' favourite, dubbed the Whirlwind for his fast playing style, has also had the heartache of losing six World Championship finals.

But White, who failed to qualify for this year's event at Sheffield's Crucible theatre, admitted winning the big one would have been fatal. He said: "I would've died if I'd beaten Higgins and won the World Championship in 1982, because I'd just found cocaine and I liked to drink. I always liked cocaine whether drunk or sober. It was no one's fault but my own.

"I'd just become famous, because we only had four channels in them days and, instead of queuing round the block to get into a West End nightclub, I was getting the treatment. I had such fun, even though I can't remember much."

The ever-popular South Londoner, said that his years of

"One day I tried it. It's the most addictive thing ever. So I became hooked on crack for a few months. It's like being an alcoholic.

"The first hit is the best like your first drink. When you're smoking crack it's pure but you never hold on to that first hit."

White, who managed to win 10 ranking tournaments despite his years of hell-raising, is now drug-free and does his best to steer clear of drug users. He added: "I would be a great cocaine policeman. I can spot people on it from miles away.

"So I stayed away from them because I sh myself. I'd let a lot of people down."

Now a grandad, White is dating glamorous Jade Slusarczyk, 32, who used to be a walk-on girl at darts tournaments and he is strictly teetotal.

He said: "I don't drink. Don't smoke. If we have a bottle of wine I want to start dancing in the restaurant.

 $hey\, are\, film\, phenomenons\, which$ attract a galaxy of A-List names and smash money-making records. Addicts of Marvel Cinematic Universe (MCU to fans) are counting the hours until tomorrow's release of the 22nd film within the superhero series - Avengers: Endgame.

Pre-sales suggest its box office receipts will obliterate all previous records set by giant franchises such as Star Wars, Harry Potter and James Bond.

Whether you're an expert on all things Marvel, or you don't know your Ant Man from your Captain America, swot up with 22 unusual facts about the most lucrative films in the history of cinema.

It is the most successful film franchise of all time making more than £13.7billion to date.

Avengers Infinity War made £158million, but Endgame is on track to break all records, with 1.65 million seats already sold. That's 2.5% of the UK population pre-booking to see the blockbuster. It has made £17million already in pre-sale box office takings – five times the number of tickets Avengers Infinity War sold over the same period in 2018.

2 It dwarfs the other big franchises. Star Wars has made £7.1billion, nine Harry Potter films made £6.5billion, Lord of the Rings £4.4billion and James Bond £3.8billion.

3 Endgame has been cloaked in Hollywood high-level secrecy with some of the cast not even knowing how it concludes.

Directors the Russo brothers wrote up fake scripts giving them to Mark Ruffalo, who plays The Hulk, thanks to his reputation for leaking spoilers, as well as Tom Holland, who plays Spider-Man.

Creator Stan Lee, who died last year at the age of 95, has appeared in a cameo role in every one of the Avengersrelated films. He is also expected to appear in Avengers Endgame.

5 There are nods to the past and plenty of celebrity cameos, too. Original 70s TV Hulk Lou Ferrigno appeared as Stan Lee's security in the 2003 Hulk film and then as a bodyguard in the 2008 film The Incredible Hulk. Elon Musk, the billionaire Tesla boss, plays himself in Iron Man 2 and late comedian Joan Rivers appears as herself in Iron Man 3. Bridesmaids star Chris O'Dowd pops up in Thor: The Dark World. And David Hasselhoff (left) appears as The Hoff in Guardians of the Galaxy 2.

6 Marvel is superstitious. The original release date was May 3, 2019, but it was changed to the last full week of April the week Infinity War was released because of the preceding movie's success.

7Endgame will be the longest Marvel movie ever, coming in at three hours and two minutes long. It exactly equals An Unexpected Journey from the Hobbit trilogy.

You might think it's all action and fantasy, but there are plenty of romances in the films, too. Not always easy ones however – petite 5ft 2in Natalie Portman had to use a ramp for kissing 12Different countries can see different films. In Captain America: The Winter Soldier, Steve Rogers keeps a list of things he needs to catch up with. American audiences saw him citing Nirvana and Star Wars, while for Russian audiences, he needed a refresher on the dissolution of the Soviet Union. And for us Brits? Sean Connery and the 1966 World Cup.

13 The music has made an impact, too. The soundtrack to Guardians of the Galaxy became the second soundtrack to sell more than a million copies - the other being Frozen.

Marvel has its own in-universe media. Marvel intermittently uploads videos to YouTube from fictional news show WHIH Newsfront, set in the MCU. They star the reporter Endgame isn't actually the end of 21 Endgame Ishi account, and Ishi the Marvel Cinematic Universe. There have been 22 films over 11 years so far and this is believed to be the end of the story for the main heroes.

22Other films are in the pipeline however, with Spider-Man: Far From Home later this year and Black Widow's standalone movie. The Eternals has also been confirmed with Angelina Jolie rumoured to star in it.

> joanne.rowney@mirror.co.uk @DailyMirror

With a multitude of famous faces battling to save the universe through extraordinary action sequences powered by eye-popping CGI, it builds on 11 vears of consistently highcalibre storytelling to deliver the blockbuster of the decade.

Robert Downey Jnr, Chris Evans and Chris Hemsworth return as surviving Avengers, Iron Man, Captain America, and Thor, with Marvel milking their charisma and combustible chemistry for all their scenestealing worth in this ridiculously entertaining popcorn adventure.

This follows on from last year's extraordinary Avengers: Infinity War, where half the world's population and many of our favourite heroes died.

The surviving Avengers who also include Mark Ruffalo's Hulk and Scarlett Johansson's Black Widow, are consumed by grief and anger, yet resolve to avenge their fallen brethren by defeating the intergalactic warlord, the mad titan Thanos.

ALL-POWERFUL

However what keeps the result always in doubt is Josh Brolin's compellingly meaty and intelligent turn as the confident and all-powerful villain.

Of course this time the Avengers have a last-minute substitute arrive in the form of Brie Larson's Captain Marvel, and her awesome cosmic ability and mischievous smirk firms up everyone's resolve.

She adds a welcome extra dimension to the male dominated camaraderie and helps address the significant gender imbalance by being at least as powerful of any of the men, and for being far from content at taking orders.

With a three-hour runtime full of shocks, stuns and surprises. this hugely-emotional finale had the hardcore fans laughing and cheering at the heroism on show, and moved some to tears.

This easily matches The Lord Of The Rings: The Return of the King, for magnificent scope and that epic equalled the all-time best Oscar haul with 11 wins.

Though I don't believe this will sweep the board at the Academy Awards, it is clear Marvel have a best picture Oscar in their sights as their endgame, and I am not betting against them getting it.

Craft tycoon is youngest ever Dragon

Mum bottled clubber after grinding row

BY TOM BEDFORD

A MUM "bottled" a man for grinding against her at a nightclub, a court heard.

Sophie Millard, 23, smashed a Budweiser bottle into the face of Ryan Iones, who needed stitches for a 2cm eye wound.

Prosecutor Eugene Egan told the court: "Millard was on the dance floor when she told Mr Jones to stop grinding against her -something he denied. "The CCTV shows her wagging her finger at him before using a bottle to strike him to the eye."

Millard pleaded guilty to wounding at a club in Aberdare, South Wales.

She faced 12 months in jail but Judge Christopher Vosper agreed to give her a suspended sentence.

He said a year would "seem like an eternity" for her four-year-old daughter.

THE New IRA yesterday admitted responsibility for the murder of journalist Lyra McKee, as police arrested a woman over the killing.

The 29-year-old was shot during a riot in Derry last Thursday. Yesterday, the dissident republican group offered "full and sincere apologies" to her family.

It came as the Police Service of Northern Ireland arrested a woman, 57. under the Terrorism Act. She was, however, later "released unconditionally".

The New IRA sent a statement about the killing in Creggan, on the outskirts

Energy firms pile up £1.5bn of customer cash

ENERGY firms are sitting on £1.5billion of customers' cash - £200million more than last year - figures reveal today.

The record credit mountain was racked up by 12 million households paying for gas and electricity by direct debit, according to price comparison website uSwitch. But more than half will all suppliers to provide the option of have to ask for refunds as many providers do not issue them automatically.

Rik Smith, from uSwitch, slammed the industry saying: "People shouldn't have to chase to get their own money back.

"It should be standard practice across automatic refunds or reduced payments for those more than one month in credit."

The average credit figure is £126, but one in 10 have paid £200 over the odds.

Newcastle has most homes due refunds at 56%. Customers of smaller supplier Ovo Energy have the highest average credit - £171. A spokesman for Ovo said: "We offer 3-5% interest on credit balances to direct debit customers."

The study also found 4.1 million households are in the red – a rise of one million.

Work was going to pay! Those who had been on long term benefits would be set free! Hallelujah. That was four long years ago.

IDS, a practising Catholic, really did seem to believe that he was a deliverer, born to save the poor and wretched of our nation.

I wonder if he repented his ungodly pride over this Easter break. Probably not. As John Wayne says in the film, She Wore a Yellow Ribbon: "Never apologise, never explain – it's a sign of weakness". And the weak and vulnerable, as we know, are to be despised and punished. That is the Tory credo. Their mayoral candidate, Shaun Bailey - raised on a council estate - has now become people. Today in-work poverty has risen sharply, partly because of savage cuts in benefits.

Nearly four million kids across the UK are living in poverty and school holidays leave a good number of them going hungry.

This week, Emma Thompson will be telling politicians just how much British kids are suffering in the sixth richest country in the world. Rising homelessness is directly attributed to austerity measures, so too other terrible suffering.

On Easter Sunday it was reported that Stephen Smith, 64, had passed away. He had multiple serious illnesses and was emaciated, yet the Department for Work and Pensions stopped some of his benefits and forced him to look for work. He had to fight for these benefits in court while seriously ill. Never mind. A DWP spokesman says their "...thoughts are with his friends and family". So, sorted then.

Hello... it's all over

Adele's marriage is over. She was with Simon Konecki for eight years. They have a young son, Angelo. Last year, the singer celebrated her 30th birthday with a Titanic themed party, a big hint perhaps. The marriage crashed and sank.

Really sad for the little boy. But the show goes on. Prepare for a whole new set of dirges about heartbreak. Think of the charttopping albums and awards to come. Think of all those karaoke bores

Many of us dread the return of the mournful songstress.

Think of us too.

Freddy McConnell was born a woman. At 29, after sex reassignment treatment, she became a man. But he still had a womb. A few years on, he felt an irrepressible urge to conceive and have a baby. He had to revert to being hormonally female. The process was hard. At times he felt "like an alien". Using a sperm donor, he conceived, had a little boy, and went back to being male. He filmed it all for the BBC. His is a story about love, family, biology and identity. This is how complicated human desires are. This is why we must never be judgemental.

Biggest threat of nuclear war in last 30yrs'

BY BEN GLAZE Deputy Political Editor

THE risk of nuclear war has risen drastically amid mounting tension between the West and Russia, peers warn today.

The threat is now at its worst since the Cold War ended in 1991, a House of Lords committee says.

In a landmark report, the Lords International Relations Committee warns: "Misunderstanding, miscalculation or mistakes could lead to the use of nuclear weapons"

the use of nuclear weapons."

The peers said that "largely as a result of the worsening security environment, global progress towards disarmament has stalled".

Recent summits between Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong-un over the denuclearisation of the peninsula have been unsuccessful. And the US president has pulled out of the Iran nuclear deal. America and Russia have also suspended their 1987 nuclear weapons pact.

Committee chair Lord
Howell of Guildford said:
"We are dangerously close to a world without arms control agreements, paving the way for a new arms race.

"Disintegrating relationships between nuclear possessor states, new capabilities and technologies, mixed with a lack of communication and understanding, mean that the risk of nuclear weapons being used is greater now than it has been since the Cold War."

Home raided after TV slot

on Concorde

BY ANDY CRICK

RAIDERS stole Concorde memorabilia from the empty home of a dead pilot hours after a similar collection appeared on BBC's Antiques Roadshow.

Tony Meadows, 84 – who used to fly the iconic plane – and his wife Paula, 83, were found dead in the in a suspected murder-suicide on April 2.

Less than a week later burglars broke into their country house in Bucklebury, Berks, and stole his Concorde collectables.

Police said their home was raided sometime between 11pm on April 7 and 11am on April 8.

On April 7, the BBC show featured another former Concorde pilot.

He was told his collection was worth "£20,000 or £30,000," by Roadshow expert Lisa Lloyd.

FIRE sweeps down a hillside in Wales threatening to engulf homes and businesses in the village below.

Families in Blaenau Ffestiniog fled their homes early yesterday as more than 30 firefighters tackled the fire

Residents from the historic slate mining town in Gwynedd, North Wales, said it was as if a "volcano" had erupted, with burning gorse and bushes looking like molten lava.

The fire was one of several that broke out over Easter after hot, dry weather. A disposable barbecue set Ilkley Moor in West Yorkshire ablaze on Sunday evening and 10 fire crews were still trying to put it out yesterday.

(38)

The fire had spread over six miles and turned swathes of moorland into a "lunar landscape", causing half a million pounds' worth of damage.

Fires also devastated moorland at Marsden, West Yorks, Saddleworth, Gtr Manchester, and Tintwistle, Derbys.

In Devon, fire crews were dealing with 12 separate blazes across seven miles, the worst stretching for three miles.

A firefighter from Merseyside suffered minor burns to the back of his head and another from Lancashire sprained an ankle. Both were treated at hospital.

The fire on Ilkley Moor was described as "heartbreaking" by the National Trust.

Speaking from Marsden Moor where he had been helping firefighters, lead ranger, Craig Best, said: "It looks like the fire has spread at least 1,500 hectares. It's almost like a lunar landscape. It's very sad to see this level of damage."

He said the group whose barbecue started the fire called 999 on Sunday evening. Some of the group were "quite distressed" as flames shot up the hill.

Mr Best said: "That £2 barbecue could end up costing around half a million pounds. It's extremely frustrating.

"This needs to be a warning that something as simple as a £2 barbecue can cause such an extensive fire."

The National Trust has been restoring the moorland landscape and the fire had destroyed £200,000 of that work, he said.

Three men were arrested on Sunday in connection with the Ilkley fire but two have been released. A third, Mohammed Zulkifl, 19, was charged with arson over a smaller fire in the Ilkley area.

Star Carol returns after 'sexism' blow

EXCLUSIVE BY AMANDA KILLELEA

SHE was at the centre of one of EastEnders hottest storylines, but actress Carol Harrison has claimed ageism and sexism drove her out of the business at the age of 42.

Speaking after winning a role in new stage show The Thunder Girls, she said: "The attitude was you're in your 40s, you're mutton.

"I think that's why EastEnders got rid of me – I was considered past it."

In the late 1990s Carol played man-eater Louise Raymond, mum of Martine McCutcheon's character, Tiffany Mitchell.

In a storyline that helped the soap scoop its first BAFTA, Tiffany discovered her mum's affair with her husband Grant over a baby monitor.

Carol assumed it would set her career on fire but once she left in 1999 the parts she said she was offered were "tarts and mutton dressed as lamb". "I was at the top of my game, I should've got offered fabulous roles, sadly that didn't happen," said Carol,

16-YEAR-OLD GRETA'S BATTLE TO

BY RHIAN LUBIN and NICOLA BARTLETT

here aren't many 16-year-olds who hold meetings with world leaders. But Greta Thunberg is no ordinary teenager - to many, she's a superhero. Eight months ago, Greta sat alone outside Sweden's parliament, brandishing a banner that read "school strike for the climate".

Now the teen activist is responsible for sparking a global movement that has led to 1.6 million pupils around the world walking out of school to join her in the fight against climate change.

And she has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Greta has had audiences with the Pope, the UN and the European parliament. At the weekend she told Extinction Rebellion activists, who staged protests across London and FAMILY With parents, sister Beata and pet dog Because I'm beginning beyond, they were "making a difference".

Yesterday she sat down with Environment Secretary Michael Gove, Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn, Liberal Democrat leader Sir Vince Cable and Green Party leader Caroline Lucas in the Commons, along with the Westminster leaders of the Scottish National Party and Plaid Cymru, Ian Blackford and Liz Saville Roberts. She arrived in the UK by train, after giving up flying in 2015. There was an empty chair at the meeting left for Prime Minister Theresa May.

Greta's message is clear - we should be panicking about global warming and it is time for governments to listen to the science.

"If your house is on fire then that does require some level of panic. You don't sit talking about insurance claims and rebuilding - you do everything you can to put out the fire," she says. "Most emissions are not caused by individuals. They're caused by corporations and states.

When she addressed MPs in the Attlee Room in Portcullis House it was standing room only – and she wasn't afraid to take her elders to task.

"Is the microphone really on? Did you hear me? Is my English OK?

to wonder..." she said.

"During the last six months I've travelled around Europe for hundreds of hours on trains, electric cars, and buses repeating these life-changing words over and over.

"But no one seems to be talking about it and nothing has changed. Emissions are still rising. The basic problem is the same everywhere – that nothing is being done to halt, or even slow, climate and ecological breakdown, despite all the beautiful words and promises.

Uncowed by climate change deniers branding her a fearmonger, she has accused politicians and corporations of stealing her generation's future. "I was fortunate to be born in a time and place where everyone told us to dream big, I could become whatever I wanted to.

'Things our grandparents could not even dream of. We had everything we could ever wish for. And yet now we may have nothing.

"Now we probably don't even have a future any more. Because that future was sold so that a small number of people could make unimaginable amounts of money. It was stolen from us every time you said that the sky was the limit," she says.

Greta grew up in Stockholm, the daughter of actor Svante Thunberg and opera singer Malena Ernman. It was a science lesson when she was aged eight that sparked her concern for the planet.

he says: "The teachers showed us pictures of starving polar bears and deforestation, plastic in the ocean. I was very moved." At 11, Greta says she found herself despairing at the lack of action.

"I became very depressed. Nothing was happening. There was no point in anything."

She finally decided the only way to achieve attention for the fight against climate change

The Metropolitan Police have arrested 1.065 people in connection with the protests, and 69 have been charged and will appear in court in London.

The Met said: "This number of arrests is unprecedented and is diverting officers from keeping London safe."

The force vowed to continue arresting those "who refuse to stop causing widespread disruption".

Perfect pasta BBC Good Food daily recipe to collect

Creamy broccoli gnocchi

Whip up this tasty vegetarian gnocchi in just 15 minutes. Broccoli, peas and pine nuts combine with crème fraîche and mustard for a tasty midweek meal

3 tbsp crème fraîche 1/2 thsp Dijon mustard

1/2 lemon, zested and juiced 200g tenderstem broccoli, each cut into 3 pieces

350g fresh gnocchi

2 tbsp olive oil

100g frozen peas 1 tbsp toasted pine nuts

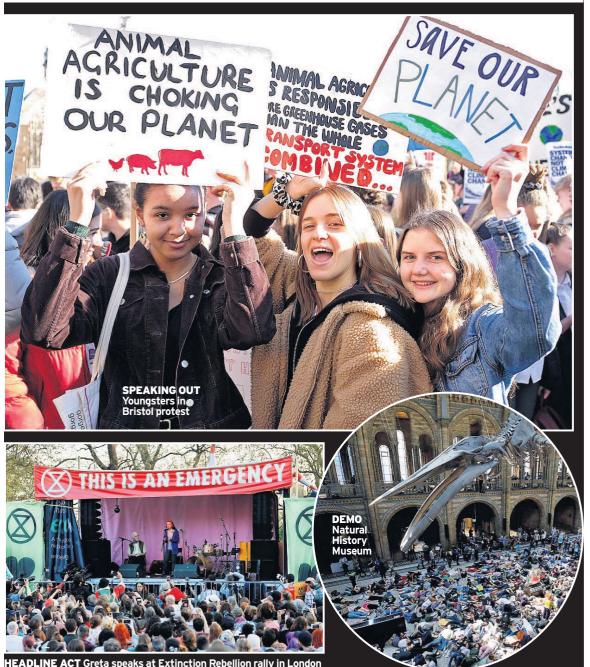

1 Mix together the crème fraîche, mustard and lemon juice. Set aside. Bring a large pan of salted water to the boil. Once boiling, add the broccoli and cook for 3 mins, then tip in the anocchi. Cook until the anocchi begins to float to the surface, this will only take 1 min so keep an eve on it, then drain.

Heat the oil in a large non-stick frying pan and, once hot, tip in the gnocchi, broccoli and frozen peas. Toss around in the hot oil for 1 min, then stir through the crème fraîche mixture. Season to taste. Once hot, spoon into bowls and top with the lemon zest and pine nuts.

"You can't be a little sustainable, you're either sustainable or not."

On Autism Awareness Day she posted to her two million followers on social media how she was "proud to be on the spectrum".

She wrote: "Given the right adjustments it CAN be a superpower.

"I've had my fair share of INSPIRATION She meets Pope depressions, alienation, anxiety and disorders. But without my diagnosis, I would never have started school striking. Because then I would have been like evervone else."

In her calm style, Greta told off our politicians, saying: "The UK is very special. Not only for its mind-blowing historical carbon debt, but also for its current, very creative, carbon accounting."

Earlier she had explained: "No country is doing nearly enough. Britain has reduced its emissions by 36% since 1990s levels. But that is not true if you include all emissions like aviation, shipping, imports and exports."

Mr Gove, perhaps sensing she is the voice of future voters, told her: "The time to act is now, the challenge could not be clearer, Greta you have been heard."

She says she will meet anybody - except the President of the United States. "I can't say anything to Donald Trump that he hasn't heard before," she says. "Obviously he's not listening to the science and to what we have to say, so I wouldn't be able to change his mind."

Despite finding herself the face of a global climate change movement, she doesn't see herself as a leader.

"Since this is a movement, everyone is equally important," she says. "I've a lot of responsibility because many people listen to what I have to say.

"I'm sure the moment we start behaving as if we were in an emergency, we can avoid climate and ecological catastrophe."

Only time will tell if MPs were listening - and Greta will know if they are being sincere or not. "I don't easily fall for lies, I can see through things," she says.

MEAN MUM MOANS ALL OF THE TIME

Dear Coleen

I think my mum could be depressed, but she's not the type to accept help. She was better when my dad was still alive (he died eight years ago), but without him to buoy her up, she struaales

She's miserable all the time and complains about everything but, the worst bit is, she's actually quite mean to my siblings and me, and about other people.

My youngest sister has just had a baby and she has been unforgivably rude to her - she told her she hated her baby's name, she couldn't be bothered to attend the christening and she only saw the baby after he was born because I insisted and drove her there myself.

We dread visiting her. Any ideas? She's 68 and fighting fit.

Coleen says

Perhaps you and your siblings need to stage a bit of an intervention. Why not sit down with her and tell her you're concerned because she seems so unhappy and angry every time you see her, and be honest about how it makes vou feel.

Explain you want to enjoy the time you spend together and for it not to be an unpleasant experience. Perhaps she's genuinely not aware of the impact she's having on the family and on other people.

If you initiate a conversation, she might open up to you. Perhaps she's never had the opportunity to express herself honestly and her behaviour is a reflection of that. It sounds like she has a lot of pent up anger that's never had an outlet.

Good luck.

Shocked he's replaced me so quickly after split

Dear Coleen

I was with my boyfriend for seven years and we're both 29. It was his decision to end the relationship and I had no idea he was unhappy. I suppose we were coasting - we'd lived together for five years and took each other for granted in certain respects. But I thought we were in love.

When he left, I was incredibly upset. He insisted no one else was involved. but he felt we'd become more like friends than lovers, and he didn't want to keep letting things drift on.

He moved out two months ago and we've recently put our house on the market, so we can sell it and divide the profit. That side of things has been pretty amicable.

However, a week ago I found out from a friend that he's already seeing someone else. She's five years younger and couldn't be further from me as a person or in looks. I had a big showdown with him, accusing him of seeing her while we were still together, which he denied.

He cried during the confrontation a love rat. I'm so confused.

and told me he wanted us to be friends and that although he believes it was the right decision to break up, he's hurting over it, too.

I don't know what to believe maybe he just doesn't want to look like

Coleen says

The way you're feeling is entirely normal – you're hurt, rejected, jealous, angry and a whole lot more, and it's going to take time for those feelings to fade. Here's the thing, I don't think you can be friends right now - it's way too soon. Perhaps you can be friends in the future once you've sold the house and you've both moved on properly from the relationship.

dearcoleen@mirror.co.uk

It would be too painful for you to still be in his life while he develops a new relationship with someone else. And it might stop you from meeting someone special if that's what you want.

There's no denying it, break-ups are hard, especially so if you still love the other person. I get it, I've been there myself, but I also know that it does get easier. You just have to give yourself a chance.

As for whether or not this girl was on the scene before or after you broke up - who cares? It's not going to change the outcome. Maybe he's telling the truth and they didn't get together until your relationship ended, but perhaps he knew her and was drawn to her and it made him question things with you.

Focus on yourself now and doing something positive with the money from the sale of your house.

Regarding the letter from the son who found nude photos of his mum, I'd like to point out there are two sides to every story (Dear Coleen, April 15).

He didn't mention where he found these photos.

If they were somewhere private to his mum, he shouldn't have been looking there and ought to mind his own business.

If not, and the photos were lying around where they could be found, she ought to be more careful. Steve Lake Milton Keynes

LIBIDO BACK BUT HE'S GONE COLD

Dear Coleen

I'm a 52-vear-old woman and have been going through the menopause. However, I've been taking HRT for the past few months and it's revolutionised my life. I feel like myself again and have lots of energy. My libido has also returned and I want to have sex with my husband more often, but he's just not interested (or at least not as interested as I am).

We hadn't had sex for a while before I started the treatment, which might be one reason, but I'm finding it hard to talk to him about it and worry he's just gone off me. It's starting to affect my self-esteem. I'd love your opinion.

Coleen says

Why are you scared of talking to him about it? All you have to say is that the treatment is working.

you feel so much better and your libido is also back, and ask him how he feels about that?

Also, it's a bit of a leap to go from nothing to swinging from chandeliers - you'll probably have to rebuild the intimacy. You also have to accept that while your libido might have increased, it doesn't mean his has. When you get used to not having sex, it can feel kind of awkward when you do it again. I think there's a communication block here - it's interesting you're worrying now that he might not fancy you any more, but it didn't bother you before when you weren't interested in sex. He might have thought you'd stopped fancying him. So while it's great that you feel better, he probably doesn't understand any of it if you've never spoken about it.

Even if it was sold as long ago as 1990, YOU MAY BE ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION

Bank investments were often just too risky or didn't match your needs. Even if you got your money back 3 or more years later with no gain or a small profit there may still be a loss and compensation may be due.

In December 2013, Lloyds, Halifax and Bank of Scotland were fined £28 million for giving bad advice and incentivising sales staff unfairly. These 'advisers' invested over £2 billion of customers' savings in 15 months earning big bonuses, but many people like you made big losses. Banks knew when a large sum came into your account from a legacy, a lottery win or a pension lump sum and tipped off their sales teams illegally. Many people were sold investments which they were told would guarantee their money back after 3-6 years and they had a chance to make more if the stock-markets did well. Some of these products were not appropriate as the risks were not properly explained and some of the terms – like those in NatWest's GCB - meant that the chances of beating a standard savings account were so small that many customers should not have been advised to take the risk!

These rackets have been going on for 25 years and almost all banks. building societies and investment companies have been fined for bad practices (see table). So if you had any investment after 1988 - take the first step by contacting us, so that we can investigate whether you may be entitled to compensation. You are not required to use a claims management company to make a complaint, and if your complaint is unsuccessful you can refer it to the Financial Ombudsman Service for free.

IF you are planning to save for your retirement, a pension is likely to be at the top of your list of things to sort out.

Millions of us have been autoenrolled into pensions over the last few years, which has encouraged more of us to use a pension as a way of saving for our later years.

They are one of the best ways of doing so because of the great tax breaks you get from the Government. And, if you are saving through your workplace, your employer will also be making contributions, helping to boost your savings and give you a better chance of saving a decent amount towards your retirement.

Andrew Tully, technical director at Canada Life, explained: "Pensions continue to be the best way of saving for your retirement. Think of saving into a pension as a way of paying you a wage when you give up work.

"Take advantage of tax breaks, any employer matching contributions, and think about how you want to invest the money for the long term."

Unfortunately, many people have been put off due to the seeming complexity of pensions, and negative publicity around employers shutting final-salary pension schemes.

But don't be deterred – pensions are just really a tax efficient method of putting money away while working, to give you an income when you give up the nine-to-five grind.

Here we explain how they work:

Tax breaks

This is the big advantage of using a pension to save for retirement over, say, choosing an ISA. As a basic-rate taxpayer, for every £1 you save into a pension it actually costs you 80p - the taxman pays the 20p.

If you are fortunate enough to be a higher earner, pensions become even more generous because every £1 costs you 60p. That's because pension contributions are deducted from your gross salary before tax is deducted.

Employer contributions

If you have been auto-enrolled into a workplace scheme, then your employer will also be making contributions into your pension on vour behalf.

From this month, your employer will be paying a minimum of 3% into your pension alongside your 5% of salary. The Government pays part of this through tax relief, so combined with what your employer is paying it costs basic-rate taxpayers 4% to get 8% invested into their pot.

Many employers will match any voluntary additional contributions you make, often up to a set percentage of your salary. So it's well worth taking advantage of this if you can afford to.

Pension experts say the 8% contribution level won't be enough for a comfortable retirement. We should be aiming to save around 12% to 15% of our salary to build up sufficient funds.

nice

There are limits

Because of the generous tax breaks, there are limits on how much you can save into a pension every year.

Annually, you can save as much as your income into a pension in that year, or £40,000, whichever is the lower amount. This is called the Annual Allowance. There are rules allowing you to carry forward unused amounts from previous years which can be used useful if you are self-employed and your earnings vary from year to year.

There is a limit, called the Lifetime Allowance, on the amount of pension benefits you can take before you incur a tax charge. This is currently set at £1.055million and increases each year in line with inflation.

Pension wills

As distinct from a normal will, a pension allows you to nominate who receives your pension after you die.

Don't be scared off by the seeming complexity...

It's really important to keep this up to date as your personal circumstances change, especially as your pension company has discretion over who receives an 'expression of wish' or nominated beneficiary form. And recent research from Canada Life suggests that three out of five of these forms are out of date, where people have got divorced, re-married or spouses

So you've diligently saved hard and have come to the stage where you want to start slowing down, give up the day job and start enjoying your retirement. From age 55, you can do whatever you like with your pension. This doesn't necessarily mean you should access it at that age, and you should always have a clear idea about what to do with the money.

The first 25% of your pension can be taken tax-free. After that, any withdrawals

I was a bit confused by a recent letter on your page regarding the full state pension. My state pension will be less, despite making 35 years of National Insurance contributions. Why?

Aln 2016 the state pension saw a big change. While the aim was to make the system fairer for all and easier to understand, it can still be a minefield - and some retirees have lost out from the changes. This can typically be because they were opted out of part of the state pension and paid lower NI contributions. If you don't think this is the case and need further help then contact the Department for Work and Pensions on 0800 731 7898.

Can you explain what a bloodline will is in financial speak? I've been told it's a way for those who've been married before to ensure their own children get their inheritance, while still ensuring that a surviving spouse can continue to live their life without any hardship.

Is it OK for me to give my son £30,000 towards his mortgage without him or me paying any sort of tax, or anything similar?

Alt is a gift. Therefore, anything over the £3,000 annual allowance will be classed as a 'potentially exempt transfer" for inheritance tax purposes. Bear in mind there could be tax to pay if you die within the next full seven years. But it depends on the wealth in your estate as to whether there would be any IHT to pay.

Preparing for a holiday when you have a medical condition: 4 top tips

Sunshine is returning and lots of us are currently planning our next summer holiday.

But if you're one of the 15 million people in the UK with a long term medical condition, there's understandably a few more planning steps to make sure everything goes smoothly!

So to help you tick every box for getting ready...

■ Looking into the state of the nation's finances reveals a bleak, and worrying, situation.

A shocking eight out of 10 people say they could not support themselves for more than three months if they lost their source of income. Meanwhile, one in three spends more than they earn each month, according to research by Topcashback.co.uk.

More than half of people say their financial wellbeing has affected their mental or physical health because not having enough money makes them feel trapped.

Seven out of 10 define financial wellness as being in control of their finances and having enough money to cover their monthly outgoings, while providing a reasonable standard of living.

Barclaycard has launched an online repayment calculator (barclaycard.co.uk/personal/ customer/repayment-calculator) that enables customers of any credit card provider to find out how long it will take to pay off their debt at their current level of repayment - and how much interest they will pay. The calculator then lets you play around with the figures and see how making a small increase in repayments can reduce the time it will take to be debt free, and lower the amount of interest.

■ Hundreds of thousands of homeowners are expected to struggle to clear interest-only mortgage deals that end in the next five years.

Research from Kensington Mortgages shows that by January 2024, approximately 250,000 interest-only borrowers will reach the end of their term and be unable to find a new loan. That's 15% of the 1.7 million homeowners who currently have interest-only mortgages.

Many will be nearing retirement, leaving little time to repay debt. But there are lots of new products launching for older borrowers, including lifetime interest-only deals, and people should seek advice on their options now rather than leaving it too late.

Big names including Nationwide, HSBC and the Bath, Leeds and Nottingham Building Societies are a few of those offering products into older age.

Leaving televisions and games consoles on permanent standby costs £45-80 a year per household

Be a bright spark when it comes to energy bills

MILLIONS of households are owed an average £126 from their energy firm, while millions of others are in debt and in arrears to their supplier by an average £122.

How can this be? And what should you do whether you are in credit or in debt?

We chatted to Sarah Broomfield, energy expert at comparison site uSwitch.com about what you need to know...

How can I find out if I'm in credit to my supplier?

If you manage your bills online, you can easily log in to check your account balance. If not, simply take a look at your latest energy bill or call your supplier.

While some suppliers refund automatically, it's still worth keeping an eye on your bills. Uswitch research found over half of bill payers have to chase their energy firm to get money back.

Why am I in credit?

Energy bills, particular those paid by direct debit, are estimated based on your use for previous years. If your consumption changes, direct debits and estimated bills won't reflect this. It's been a mild winter, leaving many households in credit.

How can I get a refund from my supplier?

Get in touch with your supplier and ask for a refund. A word of warning, though – even if you are in credit, it's a good idea to discuss your balance with your supplier.

Your direct debit should have been worked out to cover your expenditure over the year. However, if you find yourself more than one month in credit, it's usually safe to ask for your money back.

What if my supplier refuses to refund me?

If your supplier refuses to refund you and you don't agree with the reasons given, you can raise the issue with the Energy Ombudsman at ombudsmanservices.org/0330 440 1614.

What can I do to make sure my bills are as accurate as possible?

Avoid over or underspending on energy by providing regular meter readings to your supplier. It's best to do this at least once every three months.

How can I cut my energy bills?

Switch and save. The easiest way to noticeably cut costs is to shop around and switch supplier. It's easy to do and only takes a few minutes - and you could save up to £300 a year compared to the price cap in some cases.

Thermo-watch Now that the weather is starting to get a little warmer, turning your thermostat down by just 1°C can save as much as £85 per year.

on a regular basis. Once at the start of each season is good.

■ Wash clothes at 30°C Around 90% of a washing machine's energy expenditure is used on heating the water - the lower the temperature, the more you save. ■ Draught proof Ensure you have loft insulation and, if you have a chimney, consider fitting a chimney balloon to prevent cooler air entering your home.

■ Turn off tech Leaving televisions and games consoles on permanent standby costs £45-80 a year per household. Meanwhile, we collectively waste nearly £29m per year by leaving phone chargers switched on when not charging mobiles.

■ Bleed radiators This releases any air caught inside, making them run more efficiently.

What should I do if I'm in debt to my energy supplier?

Call or write to your energy supplier to discuss or explain the situation. As well as giving you tips on ways to avoid getting into energy debt in the first place, your supplier can set up a repayment plan so you can clear the debt gradually. They are not required by law to offer you an affordable way of repaying your debt, but they are likely to.

These repayments can be weekly, fortnightly or monthly, and will include a portion of your current use as well as the debt. If you're already on a repayment plan, but can't manage the

■ Meter readings Submit them payments, you may be able to renegotiate with your supplier to make it more affordable.

Ask if they have a cheaper tariff that you can move to, thereby paying off the debt a bit sooner.

Is there any extra financial help and support available?

There are various schemes:

■ The Winter Fuel Payment A contribution from the Government to help the elderly pay for their energy over the winter months. While most people are enrolled automatically, you should check if you're unsure whether you qualify.

■ The Cold Weather Payment Similar to the Winter Fuel Payment, but very rarely comes into force. It's a £25 payment for each week that the temperature drops below zero degrees Celsius for seven consecutive days. The payment is only available for extreme cold weather snaps that occur between November 1 and March 31.

■ The Warm Home Discount You could get £140 off your electricity bill. The money is not paid to you - it's a one-off discount on your electricity bill, between September and March. You may be able to get the discount on your gas bill instead if your supplier provides you with both gas and electricity.

Contact your supplier to find out. The Warm Home Discount Scheme for next winter will start on October 14.

ryan needed a bit of extra money during his semi-retirement as he wanted to update his car and take a trip to see his family in New Zealand.

Bryan, a part-time delivery driver, decided to release some of the cash tied up in his home, with an equity release plan.

'My family have all got their own homes so don't really need anything from me, but there will still be a bit left in my estate to pass on to them," says Bryan, 79, from Blackpool.

"It seemed silly having so much money tied up in property."

Bryan released £20,000 via a lifetime mortgage - a type of loan secured against his home. He doesn't have to pay anything back until his home is sold, either on his death, or if he moves into permanent long-term care.

Bryan explains: "I wasn't struggling with everyday bills, I have my pension and earn a bit of cash from my part time work. But, I needed to get the cash together to replace my car and couldn't see any other way of getting hold of a lump sum."

"I couldn't believe how easy it was to sort this out. I had everything explained to me in simple terms, spelling out all the pros and cons - so I knew exactly where I stood and the effect it would have on my estate. It was the best move for me.

Italian fraud 'had UK link'

Police point finger at British BT execs

BT bosses in the UK have allegedly been linked to a £530million accounting fraud in the telecoms giant's Italian arm.

The company had always insisted its executives in the UK knew nothing about the dodgy practices - but Italian prosecutors have claimed otherwise.

Now emails between BT's parent company and managers in Italy have emerged that appear to question the firm's stance.

Italian police claim they show there was pressure to hit "ambitious economic targets, even using aggressive, anomalous and knowingly wrong accounting practices"

The report contains emails allegedly sent by Brian More O'Ferrall, currently finance director at BT Wholesale, who at the time was chief financial officer for BT Europe.

BT refused to be drawn on the claims, or O'Ferrall's alleged involvement. The firm said in a statement: "As legal proceedings are ongoing, this is not something BT will be commenting on."

> 1172 0 -470

Prosecutors allege that a network of people in BT's Italian offshoot exaggerated sales, faked contract renewals and invoices, and invented bogus supplier transactions.

It is claimed such dodgy practices went on for years. BT wrote down the value of its Italian business in October 2016 due to what it called "inappropriate behaviour".

In January 2017 it announced that an internal audit had found "serious accounting irregularities" that forced it to slash the value of the offshoot by £530m. Former BT chief executive Gavin Patterson, who stepped down earlier this year, said at the time: "We are deeply disappointed with the improper practices we have found in our Italian business."

RUMOURS STIR COOK

Travel giant Thomas Cook's battered share price soared 18% yesterday amid takeover speculation.

Reports named a number of possible suitors for the world's oldest package holiday company.

They include Chinese firm Fosun whose chairman, billionaire Guo Guangchang. already owns 17% of the business.

Thomas Cook put its airline up for sale in February

The company has struggled recently, with a fall in demand for package holidays and intense online competition resulting in a string of profit warnings.

Thomas Cook has reportedly been approached about a takeover of its tour operating unit, and also the entire company.

Despite yesterday's bounce, the firm's share price has crashed 80% during the past year.

With plenty of suspects in the mix and the usual shoal of red herrings, expect a twisting final episode.

OLD WIFE, NEW WIFE C5, 9pm

You won't exactly warm to Cyren, the leading man in this social experiment nightmare.

He walked out on his partner Laura, having cheated on her, leaving her to raise their son Leo alone

Six months ago, Laura stopped her ex's contact with Leo because she was fed up with missed maintenance payments and sporadic visits. But Cyren thinks she was just angry that he found a new partner in Meaghan. The plan - if you can call it a plan - is to all move in together for seven days to see if they can heal the rift and make their relationships work for Leo's sake.

The result, of course, is tension so frosty it would rival any soap opera scene.

Laura, 33, and Meaghan, 19, are staring daggers at each other from the off. But as they begin to speak openly, can they become friends instead of enemies?

It all makes for uneasy viewing.

EARTH FROM SPACE

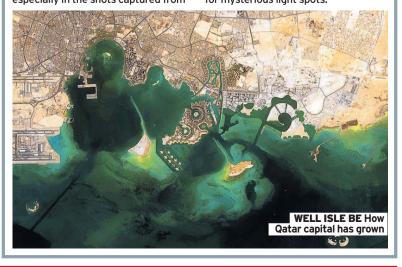

Tonight there's a magic moment when a turtle whizzes down a sand dune on its belly before plopping into the water lagoon below. A desert wouldn't normally be the best place for a turtle, but this one knows this particular desert is different. On the coast of north east Brazil, it's an 800sq km area of sand dunes - and during the wet season the rain forms little pools of fresh water. It's a sight to behold, especially in the shots captured from space. Back on land, you can also see thousands of four-eyed frogs appearing from under the sand at night, ready to breed in the lagoons.

Elsewhere, an aerial shot spies an odd clearing in the green canopy of the Congo rainforest. It's been created by the amazing spectacle of gathering elephants.

A shot of Qatar capital Doha shows how it's grown thanks to the creation of man-made islands.

And in South Australia, a million hairy-nosed wombats are responsible for mysterious light spots.

YOUR VOICE

Edited by FIONA PARKER

This is the handsome and loving Mr Squiggles. He's like a mountain goat, so full of energy and jumping and climbing everywhere. He loves to be out on long walks and never tires even though he's so small. He loves the "doggy" cheese biscuits I make him as treats, but his daddy keeps pinching them and then he looks so sad.

Althea Thorogood, Enfield, North London

THE big quest

Every day we'll be asking your opinion on one of Britain's big talking points. You can have your say and vote at mirror.co.uk

> Donald Trump is expected to make a full state visit to Britain to coincide with a memorial event in France commemorating the 75th anniversary of D-Day.

> Should Trump get a full state visit?

No. A waste of money, but if he must visit, let's make sure he is challenged on his appalling foreign policy money for him?

LITTLESTINT

Yes. It's not just about him, it's about the 'special relationship' between the UK and the US

MAUREEN DIXON

No. We can't fund our NHS, police, fire and teaching staff, so how can we find

LOTTIE49

No. There'll be even bigger mass protests than last time if he gets a state visit

JOHN HARVEY

Sri Lanka attacks sicken the world

Anders Holch Povlsen, lost three of his four children in the terrible ISIS-inspired terrorist attack in Sri Lanka (Mirror, April 23).

What a devastating cross to bear on Easter Sunday. So many more families across the world have had their lives ripped apart by this heinous atrocity, including Brit Ben Nicholson who lost his wife and two teenage children.

Terror has attacked again and again and has broken so many lives in so many countries. I believe it all goes back to Bush and Blair's war in Iraq in 2003 – a conflict that was not necessary but one that turned the world to terror.
Ashley Smith, March, Cambs

■The whole world has been sickened by the appalling attack in Sri Lanka on Easter Sunday. For the victims' families and survivors life will never be the same again.

It is beyond sad too that the massacre is bound to affect the tourist trade on which this country depends because people, understandably, will be more cautious about travelling there in the future. My heart goes out to all the victims and their families.

M Hagan, Birmingham

■At one of the most sacred of times in the Christian calendar, it has been terrible to witness the church and hotel attacks in Sri Lanka.

It's ironic that terrorists of all persuasions choose to attack those who are worship-

Yes. I'd rather Donald Trump got a state visit than some of the murderous people we've welcomed previously.

ANITA O'BRIEN

Yes. He's a great leader and he'll be welcomed, as not everyone in this country is brainwashed against him.

At least 310 people died when terrorists in Sri Lanka with possible links to Islamic State attacked churches and hotels on Easter Sunday. Eight Britons were among the victims. You say... ping under various religions and most likely praying for peace and goodwill throughout the world.

Our thoughts are with those who've lost their lives and their loved ones.

Diane Silva, Bournemouth, Dorset

■ My heart goes out to all those caught up in the terrible Easter Sunday massacre in Sri Lanka. The death and carnage it caused can only be described as the devil's work. These so called religious fanatics are not people of God. I pray for the dead and the injured.

Jennifer Phelps, Somerton Somerset

Once again the world has been shocked and saddened by news of another horrific terrorist attack. This time the victims were Christian worshippers and tourists in Sri Lanka.

World leaders need to come together as a matter of urgency to try to end this cycle of violence perpetrated by religious fanatics. Diane Nelson, Hereford

■The terror attacks in Sri Lanka were a terrible thing to happen. Reading about the ASOS billionaire who lost three of his much-loved children was absolutely horrific.

No parent should ever have to lose their children and I know, having experienced it, that life is never the same again. I am thinking of those who have lost loved ones

Yvonne Woodland, via Facebook

■ Having recently visited Sri Lanka and found it to be a very beautiful and peaceful place, I was absolutely horrified to read of the terrorist atrocity.

My thoughts are with those who have lost loved ones at the hands of these vile terrorists

Stars art challenge is picture perfect

I stumbled across BBC1's Celebrity Painting Challenge guite by accident and what a brilliant show it is.

The choice of celebrities, for once, is perfect, especially Phil Tufnell who has me in stitches, Amber Le Bon who has blossomed and George Shelley who is adorable. In fact, all of them are great. I can't wait for the final on Thursday.

Lyra killer won't win

■ The mindless killing of journalist Lyra Mckee, 29, in Derry was a real tragedy. Another young life snuffed out by a misguided militant.

When will the republicans realise they lose any support they might have by taking this sort of action?

No cause is worth taking the lives of innocent citizens. The death of Lyra Mckee must not be allowed to become the excuse to start tit-for-tat killings. D Honeybell, Hedmondwike

West Yorks

■ How deplorable that NHS staff are being assaulted at an alarming and increasing rate (Mirror, April 20). I wonder how many of these assailants are either drunk or on drugs? One thing's for sure, they need to be dealt with vigorously and iudaes need to give maximum sentences and not pussyfoot around as they often do. Why should these people intimidate and injure those who are only trying to help? Shameful. Harry Miller New Addington, Surrey

Weel of the day Shadow Minister for Energy and Climate Change Alan Whitehead is impressed with 16-year-old Swedish climate change campaigner Greta Thunberg...

@alanwhiteheadmp -I'm meeting the inspirational @ GretaThunberg, When young climate strikers speak we politicians must listen.

Now that a comedian has been elected to high office in Ukraine, let's hope the Tories don't go one better and saddle us with that clown Boris Johnson as their next leader. This would give us a hat-trick of useless Tory PMs. Mick Hall, Preston

EVERYDAY AT THE POOLS

IN DEMAND Calyx is down to 6-1 for the 2000 Guineas

Friday is D-day for Calyx decide at the end of this week whether to run the unbeaten Calvx in next month's Qipco 2000 Guineas.

Last seen when blitzing the field in the Coventry Stakes at Royal Ascot, the colt then suffered a bone injury and has not run since.

However, since trainer John Gosden ruled stablemate and antepost favourite Too Darn Hot out of the race, Calyx has come in for strong support and is now 6-1 for the Guineas at Newmarket on May 4.

Teddy Grimthorpe. racing manager to owner Khalid Abdullah, said: "We've always been trying to get him there and we've always had tremendous faith in the horse. The concern is that he's had a long lay-off and an injury.

'We want to be happy that he is in great shape to do himself justice and we'll decide by Friday."

Charlie Appleby is considering bypassing the Guineas with Line Of Duty in favour of the Dante Stakes at York

Atzeni to fight ban

ANDREA ATZENI has appealed against the six-day ban he received at Newmarket last Thursday.

The stewards found him guilty of using his whip in the wrong place on Beringer, who gave the rider his third of four winners on the Rowley Mile last week.

Atzeni said: "I am appealing against the ban. I've nothing to lose."

The suspension rules him out of the Qipco Guineas meeting at Newmarket on May 4 and 5, including his ride on Emaraaty Ana in the 2000 Guineas.

The appeal will be heard on Friday morning.

STAT OF THE DAY

The father and son combination of Peter Bowen and James Bowen are the pair to follow when teaming up at Perth. The pair boast an envious 80 per cent strike rate, showing a profit of £9.75 to a £1 level stake. So look out for MORE BUCK'S (3.30) and CURIOUS CARLOS (5.10).

And it has come without the assistance of Hendry, who was formerly married to Cahill's aunt - in the audience yesterday with the rest of his family. Cahill, a 750-1 shot for the title last week, said: "I am here to win the tournament. I play every event to win - or I wouldn't play.

Five-time champion O'Sullivan was the title favourite after a spectacular season that saw him win five tournaments from only 10 played - and reclaim the No.1 spot for the first time in nine years.

But a dozy O'Sullivan (above), suffering badly from insomnia and a bug, crashed out at the first hurdle, struggling to stay awake.

O'Sullivan was 50-1 ON to win the match - putting it up there with sporting shocks such as Buster Douglas beating boxing legend Mike Tyson and Division Two Sunderland beating FA Cup holders Leeds to claim the trophy in 1973.

He said: "All my limbs feel heavy, legs and arms, I had no energy and I just feel shattered and drained. I was struggling to stay awake. I feel absolutely horrendous.

"You have to come here feeling mentally and physically good mentally, I was OK, but I didn't expect to do well here.

Vale chief eyes deal for rivals

BY JAMES NURSEY

PORT VALE owner Norman Smurthwaite is close to selling up and considering buying League Two crisis club Notts County.

Smurthwaite (above) helped save Vale in 2012 from administration, but has been looking to get out since 2016.

Mirror Sport understands that he is finally set to go after lining up a deal to sell to Carol and Kevin Shanahan, who own Stoke-on-Trent-based IT company Synectics Solutions.

A £4million deal is due to be completed soon after Vale secure their League Two status.

Smurthwaite had threatened that if the club was not sold by the end of next week, he would put the Valiants into administration after falling out with fans.

But he is keen to stay in football and is eyeing fellow League Two outfit County instead.

County are currently bottom of the division with two games left to save themselves against Grimsby and Swindon.

Embattled Magpies owner Alan Hardy is desperate to sell up after his interior design company Paragon Interiors went into administration back in February.

Farewell to Celtic's 'Caesar'.. a colossus and the first British hero to rule Europe

McNEILL BILLY nicknamed Caesar by adoring Celtic fans and in 1967 he ruled Europe like a Roman emperor.

The picture of him lifting the European Cup in Lisbon (right) after Celtic's 2-1 win over Inter Milan, is one of football's most enduring images.

Astonishingly, he is on his own high up in the stands at the Estadio Nacional, with no fellow 'Lisbon Lion' team-mate in sight.

That was because the travelling Celtic supporters had invaded the pitch, where the trophy presentation was supposed to take place, forcing a quick change of plan.

McNeill then had to be escorted back to the dressing room by armed Portuguese police (above) with the cup - and his teammates' medals in a shoe box.

UNAI EMERY has told Arsenal supporters to lay off fall-guy Shkodran Mustafi, scolding them: "Help our players."

In an epic defence of his accident-prone central defender lasting over four minutes, Gunners boss Emery came out swinging after fans turned on Mustafi for his blunders in Sunday's 3-2 home defeat by Crystal Palace.

WEMBLEY DATE West Ham ladies are in the FA Cup final

BY DARREN LEWIS WEST HAM have failed to move their clash with Southampton so that fans could support their women's team in the FA Cup final.

And now the Irons hope that supporters will call for the Premier League to think again and give them the chance to help their ladies' team finish the season in style at Wembley against Manchester City on Saturday, May 4.

The Hammers' request for their men's home game to be brought forward from 3pm to 12.30pm has fallen on deaf ears. The move would have given supporters the chance to get to Wembley for the 5.30nm start.

But the Premier League have blocked it because of the problems it would pose for the 3,000 travelling Saints supporters.

The FA are understood to have decided against moving the game to a Sunday kick-off because of the 29,000 tickets that had already been sold for the game.

A club statement said: "West Ham is naturally disappointed, but would like to thank all of our loyal fans and sincerely appreciates the fantastic backing they give to all who pull on the famous claret and blue.'

Johnstone's Smooth Masonry for Quick Rain Resistance

BY JAMES NURSEY

NUNO ESPIRITO SANTO has urged Wolves to "go for it" tonight against Arsenal after making history by failing to commit a single foul against Brighton.

Wolves were held 0-0 by the Seagulls last weekend as they became the first team not to commit a foul in a Premier League game since 2003 when Opta started recording stats, a total of 6,048 games.

But boss Nuno (left) promises more for the clash against Arsenal.

"It will be totally different," he said. "We say to the players, 'Compete to the maximum of your strengths and go for it'. 'What happened against

Brighton is difficult to explain

- the first time there has been zero fouls. There was too much possession without goals. That's something we have to improve on."

BY MIKE WALTERS

SHANE LONG scored the fastest goal in Premier League history - in just 7.69 seconds -to stall Watford's march on Europe.

On the night superstar Sir Elton John recruited thousands of fans as extras to promote his Hollywood biopic, Long was the warm-up act and he didn't hang about.

For the Wembley-bound Hornets, it was an excruciating experience.

And that was just the half-time singalong.

Saints are not yet mathematically safe from relegation, but there is no way they are going down.

Watford's point lifts them to seventh, keeping alive their hopes of qualifying for the Europa League as English football's best of the rest.

But, for the second time in eight days, they gave themselves a mountain to climb at home by presenting their visitors with an absolute gift.

And, for the second time, it cost them dropped points. Last week, keeper Ben Foster was caught napping in his own six-yard box by Arsenal's Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang. This time, defender Craig Cathcart was the fall guy.

Straight from Roberto Pereyra's kick-off. Cathcart's clearance was charged down by Long and he raced clear to dink a neat finish over Foster. Less than seven seconds, six touches, one clanger - 1-0 to Saints.

Watford nearly managed an instant response. The clock had barely ticked over to two minutes when Angus Gunn made an instinctive save to keep out Andre Gray's shot from Will Hughes' low centre.

The Hornets wheeled out legend John Barnes at the break to conduct the communal singalong, but Javi Gracia's side struggled to hit the right notes until the persevering Gray struck in the final 30 seconds

He turned sharply in the six-yard box to rescue a point, which was the least Watford's sheer efforts deserved, if not their singing.

Superstitious fans observed that, since traditional walk-on music Z Cars had been temporarily shelved in favour of their superstar fan's hit I'm Still Standing, the gods have not joined in with the chorus.

The Rocket Man himself would certainly have been burning out his fuse up there alone as the FA Cup finalists came up with a pair of circus-clown bloopers.

But I think it's going to be a long, long time until you see a Premier League team score a faster goal.

League team score a laster goal.

and to leave Brighton heartbroken. But Christian Eriksen's 88th-minute winner was worth the wait for Tottenham as finally one of the top-four contenders stepped forward to try to nail down a Champions League place.

 $\stackrel{-}{\text{Eriksen's}} \text{ stunning left-footed}$ drive flew in from all of 25 yards, whistling past Brighton keeper Mat Ryan to lift the roof off the new White Hart Lane.

Just when Spurs fans (including Hollywood superstar Zac Efron, right) were giving up hope, they broke down the Seagulls' resistance as the visitors finally succumbed to the onslaught of pressure.

The hosts celebrated wildly, this was a huge step towards a top-four place, while rivals Manchester United, Arsenal and Chelsea have all slipped up and dropped points over Easter.

But for Brighton it was heartbreaking as some of their players slumped to the ground at the final whistle - they could not believe they had gone so close, only to lose at the death.

Brighton's Lewis Dunk defended heroically and Chris Hughton, still revered as a Spurs legend from his playing days, got so close to getting a priceless point in the fight against relegation.

Instead, it was all for nothing and Albion's fight for survival goes on, while Spurs are surely now redhot favourites to finish in the top four and the other three can scrap it out for the rest of the campaign. You might have thought Mauricio Pochettino would rest some weary legs but, after a weekend of results which suggested everyone was losing their nerve in the top-four battle, Spurs went full strength.

However, it quickly developed into an all-toopredictable battle of wills between Tottenham desperately trying to break down Brighton's resolute defence.

In the 20th minute, Eriksen's free-kick into the box caused mayhem, but Dunk simply refused to let the ball pass. He blocked it, then stopped Victor Wanyama getting there, before Bernardo hacked clear.

The biggest scare of the first half came in stoppage time when Dele Alli's shot looked as if it was heading in, until Ryan got a hand to the ball. Shane Duffy then hacked it off the line before Ryan smothered it.

Brighton had their own chance at the start of the second half as Duffy rose unchallenged, but he headed straight at Spurs keeper Hugo Lloris.

But it was more about a desperate rearguard action for 2 O Hughton's men and, as the game wore on, Spurs began to run out of ideas in the face of such resistance.

Eriksen was below-par until his winner, Heung-Min Son and Lucas Moura both ineffective, and Fernando Llorente starved of service, as Alli looked far and away the most dangerous attacking player.

Danny Rose never stopped and his fierce shot forced a fine save from Ryan, before Brighton had an even bigger let-off in the 73rd minute.

Eriksen and Son combined to set up Toby Alderweireld, whose shot on the turn hit the inside of the post and somehow crawled along the line, but eventually stayed out.

It looked like time was running out until Eriksen picked up the ball, looked up, then unleashed a shot which went past Ryan and completely changed the mood of the whole the Premier League clash. "Did he say that?" asked the Manchester City boss, when told of Solskjaer's comments.

"With an average of 65 or 70 per cent with the ball, how do you do that?

"I don't like it. I don't like it, no. My team is not built to think and create for that, not at all.

"In 10 seasons as a manager, I never prepared for a game thinking about these kind of things.

"Never have I said to one player to make fouls."

Asked if the comments could influence Marriner (above), Guardiola said: "That's the reason why, of course. But I don't think so, because we don't do that.'

Solskiaer had earlier warned Marriner to be alert. claiming Guardiola's side do not get the yellow cards they should.

"We've got to be ready for their aggression, because they will snap at your ankles and heels and kick you," he said. "They're not going to allow us easy counterattacking because there will be fouls, I have absolutely no doubt about it.

"When you watch those games, they commit so many players forward and will be stopping us as high as they can. But you don't get the yellow cards, do you? It's not my decision. it's the referee's respons

'We want to overtake City & Liverpool but we must be realistic'

BY DAVID McDONNEL

OLE GUNNAR S O L S K J A E R outlined the size of the rebuilding job facing him at Manchester United by admitting he has already written off next season.

United go into tonight's derby against Manchester City 24 points adrift of leaders Liverpool and 22 behind Pep Guardiola's reigning champions.

The Red Devils have lost six of their last eight games in all competitions. They face a battle to secure a top-four place and with it Champions League football next season. Against that backdrop, and with his position already under scrutiny after just a month as permanent boss, Solskjaer admitted United have no chance of challenging for the title next season.

"I don't think we've got the consistency to do that," admitted the Norwegian, still reeling from Sunday's abject 4-0 defeat at Everton.

Over the last 18 games, we're not far away from them, but it's doing it over the course of a season.

'We've done it for half a season now. Let's see. You can never say his remit was to "knock Liverpool off never. But you cannot expect things" their $f^{}g$ perch", with the that. It will happen gradually and we have to be realistic enough as a club that we have to take it step by step.

"That's not changing 10 players now and bringing 10 players in. It's slowly, slowly, but surely.

"It has to be the right quality and the right personality - and the right standards to get us back to where we want to be."

When he arrived at Old Trafford, Sir Alex Ferguson famously stated to happen overnight and we know Merseyside club the country's then dominant force.

Solskjaer faces the unenviable task of trying to knock two sides off their perch, with title contenders City and Liverpool so far ahead of them and the rest of the pack.

Former United striker Solskjaer, steeped in the history of the club following his glittering spell as a player, admitted it was tough to see their two biggest rivals slug it out for

"We have to want to overtake them, not because it's City and

William Hill spokesman Crilly said: "Not even against Bayern Munich under David Moyes were United this big a price to win at Old Trafford

PREMIER LEAGUE OLD TRAFFORD, KICK-OFF 8PM

City have only lost one of their last seven league visits to Old Trafford (W5 D1), with current boss Pep Guardiola winning both of his Premier League games there 2-1.

No side has won more Premier League away games at Old Trafford than City (six - level with Chelsea).

United have won fewer points than any other side in meetings between the 'Big Six' this season (six), ling to win any of their three home games so far ed Devils are unbeaten in their last 14 home ague games (W9 D5). However, United have kept just two clean sheets at Old Trafford in the league this season - no side has kept fewer (also Fulham).

City have scored 155 goals in all competitions this term – the record for an English Football League side in a single campaign is currently 156, held by City themselves in 2013-14.

No visiting manager in Premier League history has on three consecutive trips to Old Trafford, with City boss Guardiola one of just three to win both of their first two encounters with the Reds at their stadium (also Sam Allardyce and Ronald Koeman).

Each of United's last three permanent managers has lost their first league meeting with City in charge of the club (David Moyes, Louis van Gaal and Jose Mourinho) – with Alex Ferguson the last to win his first such contest, 2-0 in March 1987.

No player has scored more goals in Premier League meetings between United and City than Sergio Aguero (eight - level with Wayne Rooney).

'Anger can Spur City to title win'

RAHEEM STERLING says anger is driving Manchester City on in their pursuit of Premier League glory.

Pep Guardiola told his City stars to use the disappointment of their Champions League exit to Spurs to fire up their title push. City beat Tottenham 1-0 in the league three days after their European anguish, and Sterling (above) said: "Pep told us to be angry the day after. But on match day, make sure you're focused. We work so hard all season travelling miles and miles to be in this position, and to lose that way was hard.

'We've got five games to go, including the FA Cup Final. If someone had said at the start of the season we could play these games for a domestic treble, we'd have taken that."

Liverpool," said Solskjaer. "But of to be ready and we know football course because it's City and Liverpool, for a supporter as I am, and as a manager now, because they're so close in the vicinity as well, we want to be the best.

You cannot expect things to happen overnight

and we know that

"We have been the best, and it's not nice seeing those two at the top." United are likely to have to win their remaining four games to have any chance of securing a Champions League place, with Solskjaer admitting there is no time to feel sorry for themselves.

"It's possible (to win all four), but we've got to change our mindset," he said. "We've got to be ready for it. We can't

"We can't be dwelling on what's happened the last few weeks. We've got changes like this (clicks fingers).

"In the long run, it's standards, vour professionalism and your value as a footballer that will take over and make you successful in the end.

"Short term, definitely we can win these four games. Now is not the time to make drastic changes, but of course we do plan ahead.

We know who we want to bring with us."

THE LOWDOWN

MAN UNITED: De Gea, Young, Lindelof, Smalling, Shaw, Matic, McTominay, Pogba, Lingard, Rashford, MAN CITY: Ederson, Walker, Stones, Laporte, Zinchenko, Fernandinho, D Silva, B Silva, Sterling,

Aguero, Sane REFEREE: Andre Marriner HEAD2HEAD: Man United 72, Man City 52, draws 52 ODDS: Man United 13/2, Man City 4/9, draw 4/1

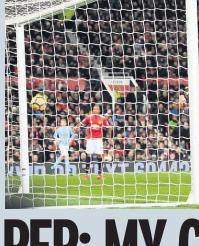

Solskjaer also called on his players to stand up and show some leadership between now and the end of the season. "That's a big, big part of being a United player," he added.

You can deal with the pressure and be a leader.

"But the proof is on the pitch. It's got to be happening on the pitch. We've had some good meetings.

"There have 🍞 been some words said the truth - and there are players there who can stand up and show they want to help take this club forward."

PEP: MY CITY ARE NO LONGER SCARFD

PEP GUARDIOLA says Manchester City are no longer daunted by going to Old

City went 34 years without a win at their neighbours between 1974 and 2008, but have won five of their last seven league visits.

Guardiola takes his champions on the short journey across Manchester tonight, needing a win to go back above title rivals Liverpool at the top.

Even though the Catalan is expecting a backlash from United following their 4-0 defeat at Everton, Old Trafford no longer has a fear factor for City.

The reason why is the fact this club in the last decade grew a lot and it's not scary to go there," said Guardiola.

"Before it was maybe more difficult. But the players Manchester City have had in the last decade have made this game a bit more equal.

"The only question is the Premier League, winning the title.

"In the three seasons since I'm here, we did better than them, but here it's about winning the title, not beating United."

Guardiola expecting United to put up a hard fight.

'I expect the best United," he added. "Football players try to do their best and that's going to happen. We prepare for their strong points and weak points.

"It's a derby and all the times we play against United, the derbies are always special games and the players do their best for the fans and the club.

"I know in the beginning how strong United will be in terms of their intensity and we'll have to handle it. We did it in the past. We'll try to do it again.

"United lost the last game 4-0 and I know what our reaction would be. That's what's going to happen tomorrow. We have to accept it - that's the challenge.

"For me, United remain an incredible team, of course, the last 20 or 25 years always there, but the past three or four years can happen in terms of a long

"My opinion about United whenever we've played is top managers, good players, always the same. But the league is competitive, not just United.

"Burnley drew at Chelsea, Crystal Palace won at Arsenal, that's why I'm so surprised we were able to reach 100 points last season."

City will be without Kevin De Bruyne tonight, the midfielder suffering a hamstring injury in Saturday's 1-0 win over Tottenham.

Guardiola hopes the Belgian can play "one or two games" before the end of the season and dismissed suggestions Riyad Mahrez could leave this summer over a lack of playing time.

Guardiola (left) said: "Riyad is happy, we are happy. Everyone knows the competition we have here."
